First Annual Semiannual Dubious Honors, Awards and Achievements

A look at some of the absurdities that are making 1977 a year to remember

BEACHED WHALE EYES OCEAN

Former U. S. Rep. Bryan Dorn, who in 1974 became the first S. C. Democrat in 100 years to lose a race for the governorship to a Republican, told reporters in May he was "testing the waters" for another race in 1978.

EXECUTIVE ACTION

Richland County Councilmen Billy E. "Bill" Taylor and Julius McKay become the first members of Osceola's "Political Debating Hall of Fame" for a serious debate staged by the two men during an executive session last March. Taylor was quoted by a source close to the council at the time as telling McKay, "I'll take you outside and whip your ass." McKay supposedly responded with: "I'll whip your ass, too." Both men will be eligible for the annual debating awards to be given next January.

HI THERE! THIS IS YOUR FRIENDLY (PANT) MEDICAL UNIVERSITY

The Medical University of South Carolina reported in March that someone was calling women in Charleston and saying "this is Dr. Carlton. I'm with the Medical University and we're conducting a survey regarding birth control methods. I wonder if you'd mind answering a few questions?" A woman who received such a call told a reporter the questions were reasonable at first, but then became "too intimate, even obscene."

A university spokesman said there was nothing unusual about the tactic. People often use the university's name "in opening remarks that turn into obscenities."

AND DRAGGING HIS WOMAN BY THE HAIR, NO DOUBT

Columbia chapter leader John Perna told a reporter in March that "if I hadn't found the John Birch Society, I'd probably be living in a cave with dried food, guns and ammunition."

YOU ALWAYS HURT THE ONES YOU LOVE...

"I can say with all the depth in my heart that I love the homosexuals," said 37-year-old Anita Bryant to a Charolotte Observer newsperson during her campaign against a Dade County, Florida ordinance that would protect employment rights of homosexuals. Bryant, whose cause eventually won, also said she wanted to start a "Halfway House" for homosexuals in Miami after the June referendum.

DID YOU LOOK IN THE COFFEE ROOM?

The Legislative Audit Council published a report in April indicating that while the Council had been able to account for 65,729 state positions, only 53,370 were known to the State Personnel Division.

JUST A FAN

Commenting on the proliferation of pornographic magazines, Governor James Edwards told a press conference, "When I look at some of these magazines, and I'm not an authority, but I have looked at some, and I think they are not the wholesome type I would like to see our children looking at."

What Andy Young Meant

Our ambassador to the United Nations, Andrew Young, has seemingly got himself into some hot water; editorialists across the land issue rhetorical screams of outrage, as if Young had slipped his hand up their dress. How dare that nigra call Gerald Ford a racist? How dare he align the United States with Third-World blocs, and against the last vestiges of white imperialism? Is he a fool, or has he gone mad, or, perhaps, is he damned smart? In fact there's method to Andy Young's "madness"; if the truth be revealed, he knows exactly what he's doing. And I'm going to spend the next few paragraphs discussing how this can be so.

Ford, Kennedy and LBJ as Racists: When Young called these men racists, he was merely expressing the outcome of a phenomenon readily apparent to anyone who's lived in both the North and the South. It is that Southerners, whatever their sins and shortcomings, have at least struggled with the race issue, for they've been faced squarely with it: black people comprise a significant part of the Southern populace.

More than that, Southerners have learnt by object lesson that the real issue is not of race but of class. To illustrate, think of a medium-sized city in central Michigan, in that bland, colorless section of the Midwest that spawned the bland and colorless Gerald Ford. Now perhaps this hypothetical city has a small black ghetto, really a tiny pocket of black residences. But if one walks down the street, he isn't likely to see a black face. Nevertheless, a small contingent of black people live in the city, and this contingent is rather homogenously poor. So when the white residents of the city think of these black people, they think abstractly of social issues as presented in the news media. It's rather easy for them to apply all the cliched notions about black people, because what black people there are in the city live apart, mostly unseen. The usual result is an attitude on the part of whites that condescends to black people, at one extreme. ("Let's have one of those poor Negroes over for dinner next Sunday.") At the other extreme, such isolation breeds a dull resentment over why black people "don't use deodorant" or what have you.

> "...how mindless and philosophically unattractive is it for us to go on supporting swinish rulers, such as those who practice apartheid. There comes a time when moral values far outweigh commercial considerations. Perhaps Andrew Young senses that the time is now..."

But now consider an analogous medium-sized city in the South, say in lower South Carolina. This city contains its pocket of black people, but the pocket is rather larger than the one in Michigan. Yet in the Southern city there is not the violent separation between a predominantly white middle-class majority and a black lower-class minority. No, the Southern city, there is a large population of lower-class black people, a smaller group of middle-class black people, a very large class of lower-class white people, and a population of middle-class whites. With such a mix of social strata, the Southern white of lower or middle-class background soon comes to learn that the paramount social issue concerns not race but class.

The Southern white, since he interacts with blacks every day, comes to understand, if only implicitly, that, just as he does not feel comfortable associating with whites of a different class from his own, he isn't comfortable associating with blacks of different class. But as a corollary, he also finds that he gets along just fine with whites and blacks of his strata. This class issue becomes so apparent in the South precisely because the Southern population of lower-class whites is so large. And the middle-class Southerner sees that, if he doesn't enjoy the company of lower-class blacks, he doesn't enjoy the company of lower-class whites any more. Then he adds two and two. Class, not race, becomes the issue. And if that sounds elitist, it's still a fact of human life. Despite all democratic denials, there are different social classes in America, and the differences matter.

For example, I myself find that, once past the usual pleasantries, I have nothing in common with the average white Southern hod carrier or service station attendant. His tastes, politics, religion, his likes and dislikes, are wildly different from my own. We cannot communicate very meaningfully, unless one of us pretends to be the cultural ally which he is not. The same goes for the lower-class black. There are basic class differences. Yet I can get along wonderfully with a person of intelligence and good education, especially if he or she is a practicing intellectual. And when it comes to persons of this sort, I am absolutely color blind. And it would be patently absurd for me to look down on a black writer, for example, because he is black--just as absurd as it would be for him to look down on me because I'm white. And I couldn't imagine looking on, say, Andy Young, as anyone but my social equal, if not my superior. Race is not the issue; the issue is class, and for the most practical of reasons. Kindred spirits tend to get along better.

Young and the Third World: Andy Young's statements on Africa place the United States closer to alignment with the developing nations than we're used to. This nation has for many decades been the premier commercial

Cynicism justified

Cynical state house watchers had their cynicism justified last Friday when the S. C. General Assembly elected Winston W. Vaught of Conway a family court judge for the 15th Judicial Circuit over his opponent Archibald Marshall of Myrtle Beach by a vote of 85-30.

Vaught was recently reprimanded by the state superme court for unethical conduct while practicing as a private attorney during the 1960s. Following the reprimand, three judicial screening committees declared Vaught unqualified to become a family court judge. The decision was not binding on the legislature, as they proved last week. Among those voting for Vaught was the chairman of the joint legislative screening committee, Senator Anthony Harris of Chesterfield.

The vote broke down as follows:

FOR VAUGHT:

Senate — Carter, Dennis, Doar, Garrison, Goodstein, Holland, Lake, Land, Lindsay, Long, M. McDonald, McGill, Miles, Morgan, Roddey, Saleeby, H. C. Smith, T. Smith, Stephen, Waller.

House — Carter, S. Anderson, J. Arthur, Barrineau, Bennett, Blanding, Blease, Brandt, Buchan, Busbee, Byrd, Carnell, Clyburn, Cobb, Dangerfield, Daniel, DesChamps, Dukes, Eargle, Edwards, Felder, Floyd, Gardner, Gelegotis, Granger, Griffin, Gulledge, Harvin, Helmly, Hinson, Hodges, Holland, Holt, Hornsby, Howard, Jolly, Keller, Keyserling, Koon, Lister, Mangum, Matthews, McAbee, McGowan, McInnis, P. McLeod, W. McLeod, Meyers, Moore, Murray, Pracht, Reel, Rudnick, Sandifer, Sauls, Schwartz, Smith, Snow, Stevenson, Stoddard, Theodore, Venters, Washington, R. Woods, Young.

FOR MARSHALL:

Senate — Ellis, Gressette, Heyward McDonald, Rubin, Setzler.

House — R. Anderson, Ashe, Barksdale, Bradley, Burriss, Campbell, Chamblee, Cooper, Duncan, Evatt, Freeman, Goggins, Gregory, Ham, Hearn, Klapman, Kohn, McFadden, Rampey, Russell, Sheheen, Simpson, Tillman, Toal, J. Wood.

ABSTENTIONS:

The following chose to vote for neither candidate: Senator Taylor; Reps. Scott, Crow, Middleton, Taylor, Gordon, Rucker, Mitchell, Hawkins, Bruce, McLellan, Manning, Blatt, Johnson, and Rawl.

Sen. Harris P. Smith published a statement in the Senate Journal that he knew Vaught personally but chose not to vote because he could not "in good conscience" vote for a candidate reprimanded by the supreme court and disqualified by the screening committees.

Senators Dewey Wise and Tom Hartnett published a similar statement: "we voted 'present' in this Judgeship Election because we are persuaded that neither candidate nominated possesses the necessary qualifications for a Judgeship."

Pipeline politics

The Alaskan Pipeline started pumping oil Monday and even though it is the longest pipeline in the world it still represents the "short end of the stick" as far as consumers and environmentalists are concerned. When the $7.7 billion project began 9 years ago the Congress particularly befriended the oil companies involved in the venture. At that time Congress refused to allow opposition to the pipeline on environmental grounds. Congress's reasoning--that the country desperately needed the oil to become "energy independent".

The pipeline was sold to the public as a dependable source of cheap oil; a benefit thought to outweigh any environmental impact-- of which we were assured there would not be any.

Nine years later it appears the environmentalists were right, and Congress again proved itself the world's easiest dupe.

In announcing the opening of the pipeline Monday it was also noted the eight oil companies involved in the venture were now lined up seeking permission to export the oil that, nine years ago, we so desperately needed. It was a move predicted by environmentalists almost from the beginning.

And as if to add insult to injury, it was also reported the companies would be allowed to charge the same price for gasoline and other products refined from the cheaper Alaskan crude as they are getting for those refined from more expensive Arab oil. So much for the cheap oil, eh?

State and pipeline officials sheepishly admitted that, even before it begins operation, the pipeline has caused a great loss of animal life along its route; with some animals, hand fed by construction crews, having to be destroyed when they became dependent on the hand outs. The long range impact of the line may not be known for years to come.

But then again there is really no wonder to the whole situation; after all, oil companies are a hell of a lot bigger contributors to congressional races than environmental coalitions.

So if all goes well, in sixty days 600,000 barrels of oil will pour into the terminal at Valdez. That is if it doesn't first pour out of those 35,000 faulty welds the General Accounting Office reports the pipeline has.

It seems the brass at SCE&G had a bit of comeuppance recently at their highly touted nuclear plant under construction near Parr. It seems for years the signs at the plant have read "V.C. Sumner Plant," the plant being named, as plants often are, after one of SCE&G's officers. Recently, however, the power company found itself a bit embarrassed. It seems the man's name is not Sumner but Summer. Two weeks ago signs at the plant were changed to reflect this latest revelation.

Of course this would quite naturally lead one to cast a rather skeptical eye on power company claims that nothing can go wrong at the plant. After all, they can't even get the damned name right!

Usually reliable source

Sir:

I hopefully assume that your article entitled "Small Fry First" in the May 20, 1977, issue of Osceola was only a poor effort to be humorous. I do not know who your "usually reliable sources" are; however, they were totally unreliable with reference to your article. The electric chair is tested by the utilization of an electric transformer which registers the voltage and amperage that flows through it. For you to state that earthworms are used to test the electric chair is absurd.

In addition, the device was last used in 1962, not in 1963. Because various appeals will be made and will delay the date of any actual execution, there will be no immediate use of the electric chair even if the death penalty is reinstated.

Finally, I would encourage you to contact either me or a member of my staff the next time you need information concerning the operations of this agency. We are also a "usually reliable source."

The taking of human lives is a very serious subject and one that responsible publications such as yours should not attempt to make light of or supply the public false information about.

Edwards' economics

Dear Sir,

The Ed Meadows' column that appeared today on Gov. James Edwards and his concept of the free enterprise system is really getting to the point.

I have also always found it amusing that the right wing extremists such as Edwards, the editorial writers for the State newspaper and people like them speak often in moralistic terms, coupling their brand of free enterprise with love of God, their country, the flag, etc. Only a cursory look at this reveals what is surely one of the great social diseases of our era.

Edwards and his buddies want an unbridled economic system, regulated only by its own inner workings, a system that history has proven conclusively to any objective observer it oppresses people while concentrating power and natural resources into the hands of the greedy. And as Herbert Spencer said, the millionaires are God's chosen few.

Here lies one of the most important beliefs of these people--the rich have God's blessing. It proves to them the concept of the survival of the fittest and they are the fittest. Money, therefore, is equated to God. Gradually, money become God. Who can dispute this in a world obsessed with buying new things. With this, it is any wonder why there is so much talk of a moral degeneration going on in this era?

It is no coincidence that such people as the governor are generally insensitive to human needs other than their own.

I watched with awe as Edwards went with fiery, pulpit zeal after the Department of Social Services. And, oh how the Columbia and Charleston media enjoyed the crucifixion. Has the governor ever displayed such zeal toward, say, the general ineffectiveness of the General Assembly, the corruption in the S.C. Law Enforcement Division or the legislators' greedy creation of high paying judgeship slots for themselves when they retire?

Of course not. For Edwards, the sinner was DSS. Why? Because it serves the poor. And the poor are ordained to be poor. They are only being weeded out from the system through the process of natural selection and we must not interfere with that God given process. And besides, without the poor around who would be called rich?

Someday, this extremist concept of what these people believe to be "free enterprise" will be seen for what it is -- an instrument of oppression that serves a greedy few. For "free enterprise" to be called free it would be required to effectively guarantee everyone only one thing -- equal opportunity. No handouts, no welfare state, nothing but equal opportunity. And I say this is the ideal that really cause Edwards and his pals to shudder.

Meanwhile, their system will remain the biggest con job this era has ever seen and perhaps the biggest in all of history.

Legal killing

Sir:

Unsolicited political "cartoons" may not be wanted. However, I felt strongly enough about the death bill issue to be moved to put pen to paper in order to make one last statement on the subject.

...As a lawyer, I am quite aware that our legal system is misused and abused--that is one reason I feel strongly that the death penalty is wrong morally. Only in a foolproof system could one logically argue for a death bill. The fact that one innocent can be legally killed by the state is reason enough to abolish the death penalty.

Dear Sir:

We note that in your May 13, 1977 issue of the Osceola; your article relating to the "Syntric saga" stated that James Burgess is the plant manager for the Walhalla Mills operation.

For your information Mr. James Burgess is not the plant manager for Walhalla Mills, Inc. and never has been the plant manager.

Burgess was employed as plant manager by the Kenneth Mills, and not Walhalla Mills. Walhalla Mills is currently located in the Kenneth Mills plant building. Burgess is employed by Walhalla Mills, Inc., but as a consultant and salesman.

Birchers invade the IWY conference: A personal report

The S. C. International Women's Year Conference was held in Columbia June 11-12, amid heated arguments and bitter controversy. The conference was part of a nationwide program to bring women together to discuss issues of common interest and to adopt proposals for legislation, but it quickly degenerated into a battle between pro- and anti-Equal Rights Amendment forces.

On Saturday morning, conference workshops were invaded by anti-ERA groups and members of the John Birch Society, who set about attempting to disrupt the proceedings with parliamentary manuevers. The disrupters had come well-prepared. During the conference a reporter for The State viewed documents intended for members of the "Citizens' Review Committee," an anti-ERA group, which "included resolutions for certain workshops ... and instructions on procedures which would delay action and debate on issues."

Although the morning workshops were to some extent disrupted by the anti-ERA forces, the pro-ERAer's — who were in a majority — got their licks in during an afternoon business session. A resolution in support of the ERA was introduced by the workshop on equal opportunity employment. Adopting the parliamentary tactics employed by the John Birchers and the ERA opponents during the workshop sessions, ERA supporter and Columbia attorney Lucy Knowles immediately called for the question after the resolution was introduced. Her call was overwhelmingly approved and the resolution was then passed without debate.

After the conference ended, Rep. Norma Russell, a Lexington County Republican and ardent ERA foe, attacked the conference and its organizers, charging that they were "violating the law (the federal law establishing and funding IWY) by lobbying for the Equal Rights Amendment." Russell, who was chosen during the conference as a delegate to the national IWY conference in Houston in November, said resolutions were "railroaded" through the conference with no thought of the costs involved if they were translated into law. "The leadership is endorsing making government a 'Sugar daddy' from the cradle to the grave," she said in a press release. "They must have felt threatened by the conservative, commonsense thinking people registered for this conference to have had police in attendance for intimidation purposes." Conference organizers asked police to attend the conference after they learned of rumors that disruptions would be attempted. The police were present, one organizer said, "so everyone would have the right to speak."

One of the conference participants was Elaine Lavender, a Richland County social worker who writes occasionally for Osceola. Lavender became an active participant in the battle between pro- and anti-ERA forces when she rose to a point of order during the vote on the ERA resolution and accused a small group of male John Birchers of causing disruptions, and later, of making threatening remarks.

Although we had not asked Lavender to cover the IWY conference for us, we contacted her later and asked for a personal report, which follows.

by Elaine Lavender

Section 1 - Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States on account of sex.
Section 2 - The Congress shall have the power to enforce, by appropriate legislation, the provisions of this article.
Section 3 - This amendment shall take effect two years after its ratification.

That, for those of you who do not know, is the so-called "Equal Rights Amendment" in its entirety. You wouldn't think that meant "a) make draft-age girls subject to compulsory military combat duty in wartime; b) wipe out the legal obligation of husbands to provide the primary financial support of their wives and children; c) give homosexuals the right to get marriage licenses and teach in the schools, and d) transfer final decision-making power over marriage, divorce and child custody from the individual states to the Federal Government," would you? Nor do I. But that is what the "Phyllis Schlafly Report" (Vol. 10 No. 10 Sec. 2 - May 1977) says it means.

Copies of Schlafly's "Report" were sent en masse to South Carolina's anti-ERA groups, including the John Birch Society, along with various other "anti-feminist" literature and instructions on how to disrupt the South Carolina International Women's Year Conference, held in Columbia June 10 and 11.

When I was first asked to attend the IWY Conference to be a "Reporter" for one of the workshops, I had no idea how important the conference was. It was my impression that it was an information--disseminating gathering of women, designed to help women become aware of opportunities and organizations designed to deal with their special problems and to make women aware of what still needs to be done in the realm of creating true quality of opportunity in our society today.

Not until the conference was taking place around me did I realize that out of the workshops would come resolutions that would be voted on in the plenary session, then to be passed to Congress and to President Carter to be considered as possible legislation. The red, non-transferable voting card in my information kit helped to impress upon me the seriousness of the conference, and so did the rules for running the workshops.

Still, I was naive. Ridiculously naive. Although I knew there would be some anti-ERA forces present as delegates, I did not know that these people had plans to disrupt the conference. Since I am not by nature a joiner and do not belong to any organizations (women's or otherwise), I had missed the NOW press conference telling how some of the anti-ERA forces had "invaded and ransacked" the IWY office on May 18.

In fact, I missed all the advance publicity surrounding the conference. So I arrived a wide-eyed innocent, filled with eager expectations of learning much and participating in whatever came along. It didn't take long to begin learning. I was learning before lunch, and by 4:30 I had opened my big mouth wide enough to land on the front page of the Sunday State.

Remarkable. So, I would just like to share a little of my experience with you, because although it is now apparent to all but the most sequestered of citizens that the SCIWY Conference is shrouded in controversy, there are a few things I would just like to set straight, because it's not over yet, by a long shot.

To begin with, the workshops were run along very stringent lines with a number of regulations to be strictly enforced. There was an official timekeeper present at each workshop who closely monitored the time spent on each report from a resource person. There was a specified time for discussion/debate and voting on each proposed resolution. Resolutions, in some cases, were presented by the workshop sponsors, but a time was set aside for resolutions to be presented from the floor. The vote was taken by counting the show of official red voting cards, and no persons who had not attended at least the last twenty minutes of the workshop was allowed to vote. That does not sound like "railroading" to me. (Rep. Norma Russell has charged that the resolutions were "railroaded" through.) I was impressed.

In addition to moderators, timekeepers and resource persons, each workshop had a Recorder whose duty was to make a written summary of the workshop and a Reporter whose duty was to make a copy of the resolutions exactly as voted on and to report them to the plenary session, where they would be voted on by all the delegates.

Since the workshop I was responsible for reporting (Mental Health and Counseling) was in the second session, I decided to attend a first session workshop to get a good idea of how things should be done. I chose the workshop on Rape and the Battered Woman. It was run strictly according to the rules and was most informative. Time was short, but just barely adequate.

The workshop on Mental Health and Counseling was a shambles, but not until it came time to present and vote on resolutions. Because the original resource persons had cancelled at the last minute, there were no resolutions prepared in advance for the workshop participants to consider. Also, a number of the people present understood neither the function of the resolutions nor the nature of the wording needed to present them to the plenary session.

Still, we had reached the point where we were voting to adopt the one resolution in our resource book (as much as an example to help participants offer other resolutions as for any other reason), and a young woman who works for the Department of Mental Health had several very good suggestions that we were trying to word properly, when a man appeared at the back of the room. He was the only man present and had certainly not been there for the last twenty minutes, but he made a motion not to consider any more resolutions. He was insisting parliamentary procedure required that his motion must be voted on when the hotel employees pushed back the partitions dividing our workshop from the rest of the ballroom. Lunch boxes had been placed on tables at the back of our workshop, and immediately after the partitions were removed scores of hungry delegates pressed forward, and the workshop on Mental Health and Counselling drifted apart.

In a quandry, I sought out someone with more knowledge of procedure than I had. It was then I learned several of the workshops had experienced far more trouble than we'd had. The anti-ERA forces completely took over the workshop on child care, truly railroading through a number of resolutions designed, basically, to do away with any sort of government help for day care centers. A number of members of the John Birch Society had gone from workshop to workshop, causing whatever mischief they could.

The plenary session began after lunch. My level of awareness had risen considerably, and I thought I was ready for anything. I was wrong. I was not ready for the John Birch Society.

Just as Phyllis Schlafly's interpretation of the ERA imputes a number of meanings not implicit in the amendment itself, so the John Birch Society interpolated some rather fantastic meanings for a number of innocuous resolutions. For example: In response to a resolution that called for the S.C. Dept. of Education to "introduce textbooks that use non-sexist language," Robert Pain of Mt. Pleasant rose to say that "if all books that use sexist language were eliminated from the schools, no school, college or university could use or teach the Bible."

Chairwoman Marianna Davis (a professor at Benedict College and a very sharp lady) pointed out that the resolution did not call for the "elimination" of any books, merely the introduction of some new ones. She re-read the resolution. Mr. Paine did not recant, he reiterated. After about forty-five minutes of this, tempers were shortening and nerves were fraying. Many resolutions had to be re-read for the John Birch representatives because they did not understand. (In all fairness, I think they really didn't understand.) Virtually every resolution from the first three workshops was spoken against, and with very few exceptions, by one of the five men from the John Birch Society. In addition, a number of insults, innuendoes, and sarcasms (not to mention outright insults and criticisms) were made directly to the Chair. Dr. Davis' patience and control were a marvel to behold.

What happened to the ERA is now history, but I must say that Lucy Knowles' approach to the microphone to call the question was one of the most graceful movements I have ever seen, as she glided deftly in front of a man who practically had his mouth already open.

Naturally, after the passage of the ERA there was a great hue and cry of both pleasure and displeasure. A number of people were on their feet saying things, and all the J.B.S. men were red-faced and shouting without benefit of recognition by the Chair, without benefit of microphone, without any benefit at all. The lady sitting next to me turned to them and said, "Sit down!", whereupon she was answered with, and I quote: "Cram it up your ass."

First Semiannual Dubious Honor

YOU REMEMBER ME, I'M THE GUY IN THE FEZ

Disheartened that discussions in the press about serious contenders for the Governorship in 1978 did not mention him, Comptroller General and '74 Democratic primary gubernatorial candidate Earle Morris told a reporter, "I don't mind my name being mentioned. Everybody else is being mentioned..."

DICK WHO?

Former state senator and Democratic gubernatorial hopeful Richard Riley of Greenville told reporters in March he decided to start his campaign early after a poll revealed most South Carolina voters had no idea who he was. "It shocked my immediate family and myself that I was not as well known as we thought I was," Riley said.

IF ONLY THE OPPOSITION HAD BEEN SO WISE

Retired General William C. Wetmoreland told a Charleston magazine in March he was glad he lost in the Republican gubernatorial primary in 1974. "I was a poor politician and a poor campaigner, and I think I would have been equally poor serving in a political capacity as governor."

S.C. BOTTLERS' JOURNALISTIC ACHIEVEMENT AWARD

This award, the Throwaway Bottle with Tabtop Cluster, goes to Redfern II, former black activist and publisher of Columbia's Black News, who appeared before a House subcommittee hearing in March and testified against a bill opposed by the bottling and canning industries which would place a five-cent deposit on all beverage bottles and cans.

The same week, Black News ran a 40-inch story praising bottlers, canners, and Budweiser, Inc.---and a giant ad promoting Budweiser products.

THEY JUST WON'T MAKE HOUSECALLS ANYMORE

The S.C. General Assembly voted down amendments to the new capital punishment law which would have allowed condemned criminals to be put to death by drug injection after Calhoun senator Marion Gressette said "the problem seems to be getting a doctor to do it."

MY FAVORITE AMERICANS?

At an S.C. Chamber of Commerce dinner and roast in Washington during May, Congressman Ken Holland told the audience of S.C. politicians, journalists and businessmen his mother called him shortly after he had been named chairman of the MFA (Multi-Fiber Agreement) Committee and said, "MFA--that's what you used to call Republicans and now you're head of it."

UNKNOWN HUMANITARIAN AWARD

In April, after much media hullaballoo, Columbia police were finally pressured into ticketing and towing the cars of state legislators who parked illegally around the state capitol.

As the first legislator's car was towed from a no parking zone in front of the Wade Hampton Hotel, our award winner, an anonymous bystander, remarked: "Poor guys. They get hassled. They ought to get a few privileges."

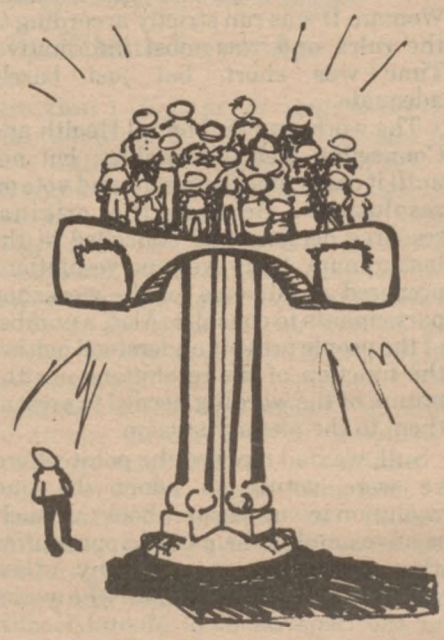
SEMI-ANNUAL EMPLOYER'S AWARD

Goes to the University of South Carolina Law School.

FIRST SEMIANNUAL SELFLESS SERVICE TO MANKIND AWARD

When a Washington Post investigative reporter wrote a story in February suggesting that Fourth District Congressman James R. Mann had violated the House ethics code by using government equipment and his office staff to help a Greenville business partner, Mann denied the charges and said he would personally request that the House ethics committee make a full and complete investigation.

As it turned out, Mann never made the request. When questioned by a Greenville News reporter about his failure to do so, Mann said he had decided that "perhaps I was proceeding selfishly, confident of vindication, and that what was really needed was an objective effort to develop more definitive guidelines for all members of Congress in such matters as staff use and constituency service."



WHAT ABOUT US MIDDLE-AGED TRANSEXUALS OF AVERAGE HEIGHT AND BUILD?

Florence senator Tom Smith, critical of the amount of time wasted in the General Assembly passing congratulatory resolutions, introduced a resolution which commended and congratulated "all persons, male and female, young and old, tall and short, fat and skinny, who have performed any act or deed during the past five months worthy of such considerations."

The resolution was unanimously adopted by both the House and Senate.

WHERE HAVE ALL THE FLOWERS GONE?

Officials of the state highway department and the Garden Club of South Carolina admitted recently that even though they had spent $20,000 in 1975 planting wildflowers along the state highway system, after two seasons no flowers have appeared.

SORRY, WE ONLY HAVE "WHITE" CLIPPERS

A Concord, N.C. barber shop owner, Donald Whitley, was sued earlier this year by a black college professor who said two of Whitley's barbers had refused to cut his hair. "We've never had any schooling in cutting colored people's hair..."

THE BIONIC LEGISLATOR

Back in January Lexington house member Norma Russell charged that female state house employees were involved in sexual escapades with legislators that "would make the Elizabeth Ray situation in Washington look like a kindergarten party." One outraged woman employee told a reporter, "If we were as bad as she says we are, we would take up money and have a hit man rub out that bionic mouth."

LUCKY BOY

Rep. Jarvis R. Klapman, R-Lexington, becomes our first dual winner as a rookie in the Dubious Honors and Awards Presentations. First he wins hands down in the "Joe McCarthy Constitutional Quotations" contest for his response to a newsman who charged that his obscenity bill would violate first amendment protections. "Hogwash," Klapman was quoted as saying. "You can carry anything too far. I'm sick and tired of hearing 'constitutional rights'."

Klapman was also named first in the "Mysterious Highway Names" category for his parents' foresight in naming him after a famous roadway connecting Columbia with West Columbia,--the Jarvis R. Klapman Boulevard.

SEMIANNUAL DUMBEST RUMOR OF THE YEAR AWARD

Word is out that Sixth District Rep. John Jenrette, under investigation by a federal grand jury, is seriously considering a race against four-term U.S. Senator and political Rock of Gilbralt Strom Thurmond--whether or not political superstar Pug Ravenel decides to face Thurmond.

SEMIANNUAL DUMBEST RUMORMONGER OF THE YEAR AWARD

To Sixth District Rep. John Jenrette, who started the rumor.

DUMBEST RUMOR OF THE YEAR (Honorable mention)

Osceola printed a rumor to the effect that the S.C. Department of Corrections uses earthworms to test its electric chair.

BEST CONTINUING RUMOR WITH LITTLE OR NO FOUNDATION (Dum Spiro Spero Award)

The Charlotte Observer is seriously considering/has already decided to begin publishing a South Carolina edition, based in Columbia, which will be in direct competition with the State-Record monopoly.

BEST IDEA FOR A NEW LAW

Goes to the unidentified motorist who recently suggested the new death penalty law be amended to include motor vehicle operators who fail to turn right on red.

2½ MILLION, COUNT 'EM

Sen. Tom Turnipseed of Lexington wins in the "If You Can't Lick 'Em, Join 'Em" category. Turnipseed, along with about 20 other so-called leaders of the community, spent several months earlier this year organizing "The People Are Coming Rally" which was held back in April. The Rally was to draw people from all over South Carolina to the statehouse grounds in Columbia to support what Turnipseed called "people-oriented" legislation. About four or five hundred persons showed up for the event.

Turnipseed--not to be outdone by the apparent failure of this year's rally to attract the people quietly revealed to close aides recently that next year he would organize "The People Are Staying At Home" rally. Not only would the numbers be baffling compared to this year's turnout, Turnipseed reportedly said, but it would not be necessary to name any organizing sponsors. Apparently Turnipseed intends to take all the credit for next year's event by keeping the date for the rally secret until the day before it happens.

OH LORD, DON'T LET ME BE MISUNDERSTOOD

A few weeks before Congressman Butler Derrick made his decision to oppose the Richard B. Russell Dam and Lake project in his Third District, former Third District congressman and ardent dam supporter Bryan Dorn said on a radio talk show in Columbia that if Derrick didn't do the right thing, Dorn might just challenge him in the '78 Democratic primary. Dorn told listeners he wouldn't think of entering the race if Butler backed the project, but "I do feel very deeply about the dam...I would hate to see that go down the drain."

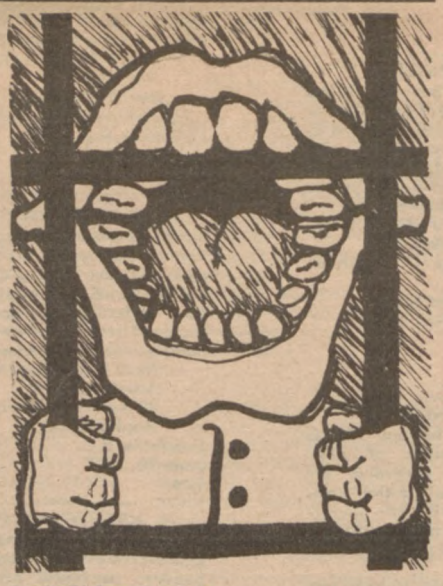
When Derrick not only came out against the dam but assumed a leadership role among Congressmen and administration officials fighting Russell and 16 other federal boondoggles, Dorn backed off. "I was misunderstood," Dorn protested. "I have no plans to run for Congress. Butler and I are good friends."

I KNOW WHAT I LIKE

Fifteenth Circuit Solicitor J.M. "Bud" Long wins the semi annual "Community Standard" award. If you'll remember Long touched off near porno hysteria earlier this year by becoming a one-man vigilante force against drug stores and convenience stores in Horry County that sold what he considered pornographic materials.

JUSTICE NO BARGAIN

South Carolina's circuit court judges asked the General Assembly in February for $22,000 raises, which would have brought their salaries up to $62,000 a year.



SOME PEOPLE WILL EAT ANYTHING

A Conway man was charged with three counts of assault and battery of a high and aggravated nature in May after he bit three North Myrtle Beach policemen as they were attempting to lock him in a cell.

The incident, described by the North Myrtle Beach Times as an "alleged feast", occurred after the Conway resident and a companion overturned a boat in a Cherry Grove inlet and were arrested on charges of public drunkenness. The Times reported one patrolman was bitten on the arm, and a second received "a sharp bite into the chest." The Conway man then "clamped his teeth into two areas" on a third patrolman's leg.

Following this light lunch, the man was charged and released on $5000 bond.

DAN MCLEOD

"You say tomato, I say tomahto. Let's call the whole thing off..."

SEMIANNUAL BEST HEADLINE AWARD

The semiannual headline award goes once again to the Columbia State for this one-column masterpiece, "Party Chairman To Take Leave." In the best newspaper tradition, the headline tells it all--well, almost.

From the story we learn that Lexington County Democratic Party executive director (not chairman) Clifford F. Kelley has taken "a leave of absence pending his appeal to the State Supreme Court of a Lexington County jury tampering conviction."

BEST CON JOB

The U.S. Attorney's office in Columbia revealed in May that the Social Security Administration is sending a $750 disability check each month to convicted dope smuggler Karl Hawkins, who is presently a fugitive, believed to be hiding in Central or South America. Hawkins was disabled in 1974 when his plane was shot by Jamaican authorities as he tried to fly a $150,000 drug shipment off the island.

FOR THIS HE SHOULD BE REWARDED?

Arthur M. Manigault, an early stockholder who rescued the Charleston Evening Post from oblivion in the 1890's, was named in February to the S.C. Journalism Hall of Fame.

KLANSMAN STRIVES FOR RACIAL HARMONY

Eddie Galloway of Greenville, Titan of the 4th Province of the Invisible Empire of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan of South Carolina, is our semi-annual winner of the Osceola Special Citation for Contributions Toward Better Race Relations.

Galloway led a February Klan protest against the use of two books--John Steinbeck's "Of Mice and Men," and Margaret Walker's "Jubilee"--in the Greenville County school system. Galloway told reporters the books contain profanity and offensive descriptions of sexual relationships between white slaveowners and black slaves. "These books should be destroyed, burnt," Galloway said. "In my opinion, the only education in these books is the education of the gutter."

Galloway clinched the coveted award with his observation that "these books are producing racial strife and hatred."

DO AS WE SAY NOT AS WE DO

Southern Bell Telephone Company in South Carolina wins in the "We Don't Practice What We Preach" category for their failure to pay the bills they owe South Carolina consumers the way they expect S.C. consumers to pay them. If you remember, the South Carolina Public Service Commission turned down Bell's requested $34 million increase last January. The Company had about half of the requested amount under bond at that time and as of January owed customers about 12 dollars each.

Of course Bell is still in the process of appealing the PSC's decision and the courts have given them permission to continue charging the higher rates under bond until the S.C. Supreme Court makes the final decision in the case. So now they owe you about 22 dollars and they're still crawfishing on paying it back. But try not paying your phone bill for a couple of months--even if it's less than what they owe you--and see what happens. You get cut off, Right? If only somebody would come up with a way to cut them off.

TRICKY DEVILS

S.C. Commission on Drug and Alcohol Abuse director Jerry McCord told a reporter that marijuana use has shown up increasingly in drunk driving arrest cases, but law officers are not always able to detect drug use because sly users often "mask" marijuana or some other drug with a couple of beers.

BEST CORRECTION

This from the March 10 edition of the Orangeburg Times and Democrat: "In a news article on page 1B of Wednesday's edition of The Times and Democrat concerning two candidates for the Veterans Service Office position, it was incorrectly stated due to a typographical error that Booker T. Tolar was previously employed with the Family Court Panthers Program. It should have read the Partners Program."

BABBLING BOOB

Doug Nye, a columnist for the Columbia Record, gets an honorable mention in creative writing for his column, "A Talk With the Animals." According to Nye the question "What bothers you most in life" was put to a variety of animals, and Nye came up with such imaginative answers from the respondents as: "Rapid Ronnie, rabbit -- The birth rate. Somebody needs to do something about that for us rabbits. One day there won't be enough carrots to go around."

An informed source tells us that Nye also talks to walls and to garbage cans, where his editor spends much of his time with Nye's copy. It is also rumored around the Record that a medium-sized rat who makes his home in Nye's office--Babbling Boob--writes about half of Doug's columns.

IT'S THAT FAT, LUMPY THING RIGHT ABOVE YOUR SHOULDERS, FRITZ

At the same May dinner and roast, U.S. Senator Fritz Hollings told a joke he said described his feelings about Jimmy Carter in the wake of Carter's decisions to delete funding for the Russell Dam and the Barnwell nuclear fuel reprocessing plant. Hollings said he felt like the blind man whose seeing-eye dog pulled him out in front of several lanes of on-coming traffic. When they somehow got to the other side of the street alive, the man tried to give the dog a treat. A stranger walked up, Hollings said, and chided the blind man. "Don't reward that dog. He almost got you killed." The blind man replied, "I'm not going to reward him. I'm just trying to find his head so I can kick his ass."

Not an altogether appropriate response. I was on my feet again and to the microphone where I made my new infamous request to have the "gentleman" removed from the floor. Chairwoman Davis very graciously allowed him to stay.

Things quieted down, and not too long after that, due to a prior engagement (I didn't realize the conference would last so long - it was scheduled to end at 4:30) I had to leave. But as I understand, it lumbered to an end without anymore terribly major conflagrations, and the plans to disrupt were basically unsuccessful. I was wiser and very tired.

But still the conflict rages, and Rep. Norma Russell has leveled a number of charges at the IWY Committee. Probably none of these can be substantiated. Mrs. Russell seems to suffer from the same lack of understanding as the Birchers. Indeed, she aligned herself very closely with them throughout the entire conference. In response to her charge that the resolutions from the conference, if acted upon, would "make government a Sugar Daddy from the cradle to the grave" I can only say (in print) Balony! Many of the resolutions simply call for monitoring, change of policy, non-discriminatory entrance opportunities in state-supported schools, and other such anti-discriminatory practices - all things which would cost exactly nothing and would surely benefit the organizations and institutions involved.

When Mrs. Russell charges that the IWY Conference is violating the law by sending copies of all the resolutions to the State Legislature because this constitutes lobbying for the ERA she is nit-picking, and, I think, likely to be laughed at. Of course it won't be the first time she's been laughed at. Remember the allegations made back in the winter about the "scandalous behavior" of many legislators that she was going to pursue with litigation? Ah, well, let that pass. She doesn't need any help to make herself look a fool. I have it on good authority from your basic reportorial Reliable Source that a while back Mrs. Russell was certain that someone from DSS was trying to sabotage her big V-8 Mercedes. Ah, Norma, those who live by the sword...But if we are indeed judged by the company we keep (as so many of us who grew up in the South were so judiciously taught), I would simply like to point out that Norma Russell keeps mighty close company with the John Birch Society. Ah well...

colonialist of the world. In the process, we've raised the gross national products of many poor nations, by developing and exploiting their raw material resources. But in the meanwhile, these nations, most of them, have remained poor and economically oppressed. And to the extent that we've backed dictatorial regimes (they tend to be stable and thus good for business), we've become the oppressors.

Yet how mindless and philosophically unattractive is it for us to go on supporting swinish rulers, such as those who practice apartheid. There comes a time when moral values far outweigh commercial considerations. Perhaps Andrew Young senses that the time is now. It may also be that he sees in the future the rise of an era of confrontation, by which the desperately poor nations collectively serve notice, as the Arabs have already done, that they will no longer accept their status quietly. Anyone who has traveled and lived in the Third World cannot help but ponder the possibility of a future when the poor nations finally become fed up.

Now it may not be true, either absolutely or relatively, that these nations are poor because American commercial and political interests have prevented them from becoming rich. In fact, this is usually not the case; the problem most often lies in the cultural attitudes of many a poor nation, and it lies in the corruption of the indigenous governments of these poor nations. Yet the psychology of poverty is such that scapegoats and whippingboys are lustily sought, and the United States, given its benign neglect of Third World and Fourth World peoples, not to mention its active political and military support of seamy foreign governments, makes a prime scapegoat.

Hence, does it not make eminent sense for Young to alter our foreign policy away from its uglier manifestations, and toward the moral values we pretend to hold dear? Our image can only benefit thereby. And in any future confrontation between poor nations and rich ones, we just might fare better because Andy Young used a little common sense.
